In compliment to their comrades, President James Kinderd and other officers of the International Association of Bridge and Structural from Workers, local 28, have se-cured seats for this evening, when they will attend "The Bridge" in a body.

No bill that has been given at the Empress since it opened has offered more in novelty, eleverness and genuine entertainment that the programme which closes at that house with today's performances. "The Devil and Tom Walker" will remain a headline sketch for seasons to come. It is by far the most pretentious vaudeville production that has yet come to the Empress. Black and White, and a dramatic sketch, "The Card Party," are each a headline act of the S. & C. standard. The new bill which opens tomorrow afternoon includes the George Bonair troupe of acrobats as the headline offering.

It would seem to be a foregone conclusion that those who have heard Creatore's band here and elsewhere will be on hand to welcome the noted conductor and his troupe of soloists at the tabernacle tonight. The engagement of the band in Fait Lake is for four performances—tonight, Wednesday and Thursday nights, and a matinee Wed-

TWO MINDS

IN ONE.

· Talk about your psychological marvels! I saw one a few weeks ago that was brand new to me.

I was invited by the principal of a well-known commercial school to see a young man from the Remington Typewriter office give a demonstration on the Visible Model 10 Rem-

"A demonstration on the type-writer? What is new in that?" I wondered. "I can see scores of such demonstrations every day in any busi-

Nevertheless, I had a feeling that it must be something out of the ordinary, so I went.

I watched the young man for some minutes copying from manuscript. Of course, he was a very fast operator and a very accurate operator, and all that. He fairly made his Remington hum. "But what of it?" I thought. The woods are full of fast and accurate operators.'

Presently the school principal took me up and introduced me to the young man. He acknowledged my salutation but continued his writing.

I asked him a few questions about himself and his work. He answered them, still writing.

Then it dawned upon me that here indeed was something out of the ordi-

All the while that this young man was talking to me, he never ceased to copy from his manuscript. He was doing what psychologists have gravely told us is impossible. He was performing two separate mental operations at one and the same time.

But this was not all. It was only the beginning.

"Do you speak German?" asked our host.

I confessed my ignorance of that language. But a German happened to be present, and he took up the conversation. The operator answered him-in German; while he still continued to write-in English.

Then a man was found in the audience who spoke French, and the same test was repeated in that language, for the operator was not only a proficient typist but also an accomplished linguist.

There was no stumping that operator in his remarkable feat of two simultaneous mental operations. He could converse fluently in French or German while at the same time copying from English manuscript, and he showed us later that he could just as easily reverse the process. It was all new to me and to everyone presentas new as it was extraordinary.

"But of what practical use is it?" I thought on my way home.

Then my mind began to stray back suffered untold misery every month, over the earlier days of the writing and had to stay in machine. I remembered another marbed the first two or vel of 20 years ago, when Frank Mc-Gurrin, the pioneer "touch" open ator, the first typist who ever operated the machine without looking at the keys, was giving his exhibitions on the Remington Typewriter in all the cities of North America.

> I remembered how they called Mc-Gurrin a freak, a sort of magician, who did what no other operator could ever do. Today the whole business world knows that all the best operators are "touch" operators.

The wonder of vesterday is always

It is not the "two in one" stunts that this young man does that matter in themselves. It is the fact that he is able to do them, for this fact proves what perfect mechanical proficiency an operator may attain with practice.

The lesson this latest marvel teaches is that the typist becomes proficient by becoming mechanical-a human If you have the slightest doubt automaton. And only when typing that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegeta- becomes as mechanical and unconscious as walking, is the typist truly

> Twenty years ago the Remington Typewriter Company brought out Frank McGurrin as an example to the operators of his day. Now they have brought out this new marvel as an example to the operators of the present. Thus the Remington Typewriter fulfills its rôle as the perpetual pioneer, not only in the development of the machine itself, but in every development of its skilled operation.
